EdenAreaROP

Class: Medical I	Teacher: Machado
Student Project Name: Service-Learning Website Builder	Student Name:

Hello Medical I Students:

I hope all is well. While you are out of school, I would like you to design a Service-Learning website that coincides with your year-long research project.
This project will allow you to showcase your leadership skills and abilities to gather accurate medical research by creating your very own website. You will work together in your groups (so get necessary phone numbers/emails to communicate with one another) to build this website highlighting the medical research compiled so far. Using the website builder, wix.com, create an account that you will share as a group. Given that you have researched varying issues/diseases, you will create sections (perhaps different tabs) and include images, data, references etc. on your different issues/diseases. Please remember that this project should be interesting, so design a website that has accurate and current information/data. This project will count for extra credit and will replace the first week of class (15 hours).

*For those of your who were FACES/Interns, you may link up with the groups you were in before, create a new group with other FACES/Interns or work on this project individually. Remember to check ThinkWave regularly and stay safe and healthy.

For the second week of class, please complete Ms. Sidhu's College and Career Readiness Project.

If you have any questions, please email me at amachado@edenrop.org